

WORLD SERIES ENDS AS GIANTS WIN FINAL, 1-0

After 16 Years of Vainly
Striving, McGrawites Reign Supreme.

great pitching of Barnes, Douglas and Nehf.

With Ruth out of the game it became a Giant procession, but even with Ruth out, the better ball club won. The club won that had the greater speed and the greater steadiness upon defense. The Yanks, starting with an unexpected burst of speed, soon lapsed back to their ancient ways. They had in Mays and Hoyt two of the greatest pitchers of the game. They had in Hoyt a star who held the Giants to one earned run in the first seven innings, one of the great performances of all time.

But with their own abject weakness on attack in the last three games against Barnes, Douglas and Nehf, their sole chance for victory rested upon their ability to back up brilliant pitching with unbroken support.

It was here they faltered and wavered and finally crashed as the series drew on to its close. No team that is weak at bat and spotty upon defense at critical moments can hope to be carried safely through.

No one arm that ever hung from a shoulder was ever strong enough or sufficiently dexterous to make up for weakness at bat and unsteadiness in the field.

The Giants earned their triumph by greater defensive steadiness under fire. They were more alert in the final, were sure when steadiness was needed in the closing drive. Unable to earn runs in the two final days, they were, at least, alert enough to profit by opposing weakness.

Giants Win Pitching Events.

Outside of these elements there is still another that enters in any final summing up. Huggins had two star pitchers, McGraw three. Huggins had Mays and Hoyt to match Douglas and Nehf. But Huggins had no one left to match Jess Barnes, who each time came in with a deficit to cover. It was a case of being outnumbered when it came to a matter of winning reserves.

The hardest blow that overtook the Yanks was the last-minute defection of Ward and Peck, who all through the series had been ball-playing magicians on every type of difficult chance. Three Giant runs trickled in through their three misplays, with Mays and Hoyt both deserving a kinder fate.

Nehf in the final act had all the stuff in the world. His speed was baffling. His curve ball cracked like a whip. But he was shy at times on control, a weakness the Yankees helped to correct by hitting at anything within a foot of the plate. So it came about that after a ragged start the Giants rallied and won five of the last six games. They won three straight to prove their better fitness in a pinch.

They found two pitchers they couldn't hit, but the others were open targets for their busy bats. The 270,000 people cracked all records by paying in over $800,000 to see the eight-day show, setting a mark that will not be equaled soon.

So far as final equity is concerned, it was more than fitting that the Giants should win, as they happen to be the best ball club in either league, so far as all around value goes. In Young, Burns and Meusel they have the best top outfield in the game. In Bancroft and Frisch they have two infield stars, while Rawlings at second held his pace with the best on the field. They had greater pitching quality and quantity combined than the Yanks had, far greater speed and greater defensive ability in the closing tests.

Debs Case Awaits Peace Ratification

Action in the Debs case still awaits the final ratification and exchange of peace treaties between the United States and the central powers. The government's course in the matter, it was stated both at the White House and the Department of Justice yesterday, remains unchanged. Reports that Attorney General Clegg had tendered a pardon for Debs were positively denied at the Department of Justice. While Debs was not in the city, it was stated by his assistants that final recommendations in the case have not yet been laid before President Harding. Debs Daugherty has stated that in the event of a reprieve or pardon for Debs, there would be no "strings attached to it."

Justice Hoehling ordered McCrea to appear on October 20 and show cause why the request of his partners should not be granted.
